Tim laid down the pot beside me, and returned to close the bunker. I uncovered the pot and put in my spoon to take out some, but thought Tim's exhortation rather superfluous, as there was little more left than served to cover the bottom. I scraped out a small quantity, and tapped it on the edge of my plate.

"O, come, come, Dick!" said Tim, "that's nothing. Allow me."

He took up the spoon, but had no sooner glanced into the pot than his face contracted into an expression of extreme indignation and disappointment.

tains the following intelligence from Charicaton:

CHARLESTON, Nov. 17.—Two monitors, which were cugaged in the bombardment, were not used this morning. Reports from Moultrie say that the leading monitor in the fight had her smoke stack and turret perforated.

A report from Sumter states that four monitors took positions Ao-day near Cummings Foint, and afterwards passed up the channel. It is believed that they carried heavy weights suspended at a certain depth below the water to ascertain if there was a passage for vessels of a certain draft.

The bombardment of Sumter last night waabout as usual. There is slow firing this morning.

It is reported that one gun bursted at the last fire.

There has been slow firing on Sunter all day. The present indications are that the enemy intend more extensive operations. No monitors are in action to-day. They have relired.

The Richmond Exeminer says:
"Seven hundred more Yankee prisoners were sent to Danville yesterday. One hundred and fiften Yankee prisoners were received at Libby prison from Charleston on Monday night. Among them were the satters and marines captured in the last night assault on Sunter's battered walls."
